Von Malanotti.

The Malanotti family goes back to the 11th century. Patrons of art and culture, they traded fine silks and made fine wine (in honor of the family now designated Piave Malanotte DOCG) in the Val di Sole, in Treviso and in Venice. Rooted in the tradition of the Malanotti family, Mario & Casa continues to use only the finest fabrics for its rugs and upholstered furniture.

Having grown up in Austria with Italian roots and having worked all over the world, Mario's design sensitivity is both Mediterranean and cosmopolitan, accentuated by a Northern precision for line and detail.

Mario Gagliardi, designer and founder of Mario & Casa, is the grandson of Eugenio Malanotti. Mario's creative approach was formed during his time as a student of design legends Alessandro Mendini and Richard Sapper.

Mario's designs are joyful and innovative, establishing spatial richness and archetypal metaphors. Rethinking the formats of contemporary interiors, he creates extraordinary objects on the fundament of centuries of craft tradition.

At the artistic performances and costume parties at the early Bauhaus, Kandinsky appeared as an antenna, Itten as amorphous monster, Gropius as Le Corbusier, and Feininger as two triangles.

MEZZALUNA

A favorite project of Mario's former teacher Alessandro Mendini was to redesign furniture with his own canon of forms. One of his redesigns was the Hill House chair by Charles Rennie Mackintosh. Taking the same chair, Mario redesigned it with his own approach.

For Mario's redesign of the Hill House chair, he took a polar opposite, the ubiquitous banquet hall chair. Questioning normative territories of low and and high taste, Mezzaluna combines the forms of the banquet hall and Hill House chairs, with padded elements, a high back and latticework. Unlike the chairs which inspired it, it is designed for easy assembly and disassembly to be flat-packed for transport.

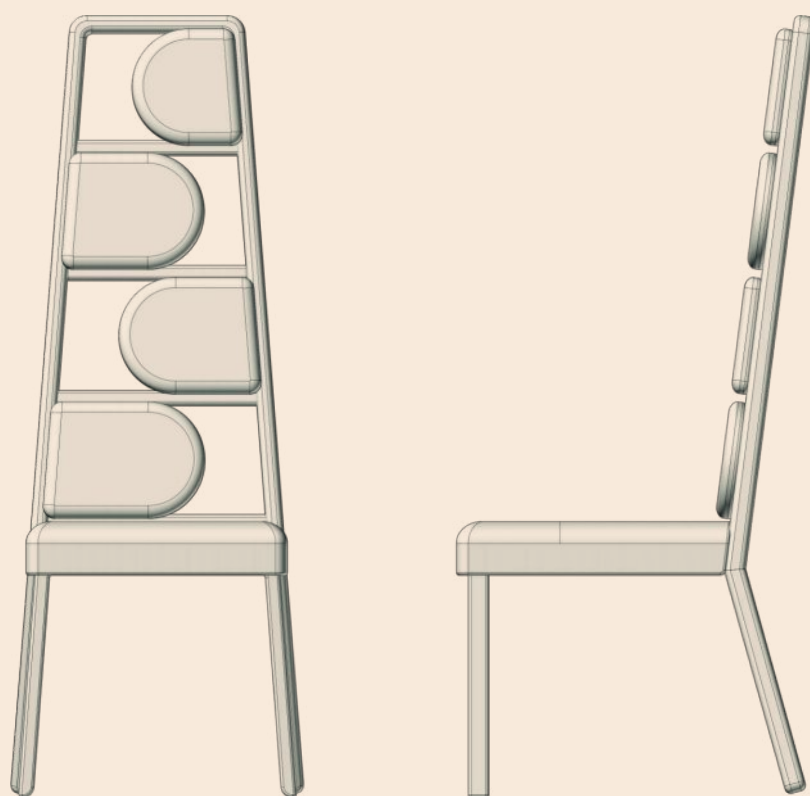

Segmented cushioning on the backrest provides for cozy comfort without blocking views.

Low-back and high-back versions allow for varied height modulations in your space.
